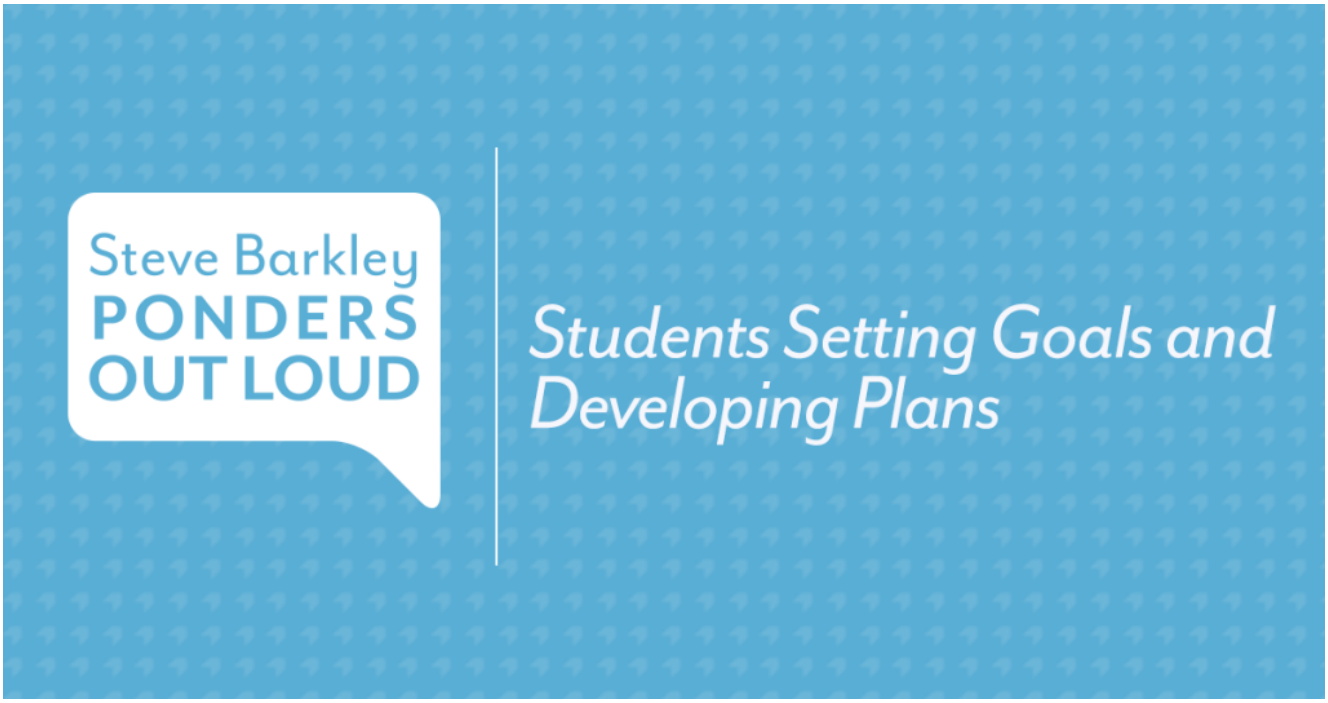
Podcast: Students Setting Goals and Developing Plans



Students' abilities to set goals, plan for success, and systematically collect feedback are critical to school and life success.

Starting the school year teaching these processes (at all grade levels) can set the stage for increased student success throughout the year and beyond. This podcast shares important elements to build into your plans for effective goal setting and identifies how a middle school team collaborated with a physical education teacher in teaching and coaching goal-setting and planning for success.
